NEW DECOMPRESSION TABLE RELIEVES PAIN

Darren Strong from Strong Chiropractic, announces a new, sophisticated computerized decompression table that allows the spine to be gently stretched and relaxed for spinal decompression therapy.

The pattern of alternating pulling and relaxing creates vacuum-like pressure which allows disc material that was herniated or protruded to be pulled back in the disc over time.

Patients will notice a reduction of their pain during these treatment sessions. Stop in today and ask about the new table and how you can benefit.

A Partridge In A Pear Tree

We have all heard the Christmas Song "A Partridge In A Pear Tree" and this is a heart warming story of a hopeless romantic who tried to recreate the song in present form for his fiancé for their first Christmas.

He got very creative as he could not actually have 11 pipers piping and madis a milking and so on but he substituted for these things in a creative way. His friends all laughed and called him an idiot but the girls all thought it was so romantic and wasn't Patsy lucky to have such a wonderful and thoughtful man.

Anyway, the whole concept was to have a small table tree decorated with all these gifts enclosed. Dan asked me to help him get the "partridge in a pear tree". I suggested that we could trap a real partridge in a cage. It sounded easy and if you ever saw a partridge, they have to be the most stupid of all the birds. They will wander out in front of your car in that crazy waddle they do.

So, fortified with a half flask of Capt. Morgan, my brother and I set out to get the partridge. We put the trap along the side of the road to our bungalow where we narrowly missed running over the partridge every time we came to the bungalow. By dinnertime we were getting a little bored but we stayed with it. At four o'clock without any sign of the partridge, we decided we would alter the plan and set off to capture a pigeon.

This was our second choice by we figured "what the heck, a bird is a bird" and besides it wasn't our girl friend we were getting the bird for anyway. We arrived back at the apartment and Dan had all the presents set. We suggested that he tie the "partridge" on the top of the tree with a small piece of transparent fishing line so he would stay in place.

I have to admit the tree was looking pretty good and he invited all our family and his girlfriend's family over for the presentation. Well, the tree was a huge success and Dan's fiancé, Barb, was happy beyond belief. Yes, everything was fine until someone decided to take a picture.

The "partridge" had been sitting quietly perched on the top of the tree. When the first camera flash went off, the pigeon flapped its wings in a frenzy and the girls started to scream. The tree was rocking and the bird finally snapped the fishing line and was free. It flew around inside the house and was banging the walls and knocking pictures and lamps over until finally we opened the door and he escaped into the frosty night.

Chaos reigned inside. Barb was crying, Dan was just stunned, her father was surveying the damage and I was outside rolling on the lawn in hysterical laughter. So, that's the reason I never try to get too romantic because I saw the results first hand. and a partridge in a pear tree.

Facebook can be a great way to keep in touch and open doors to new things-such as Newfoundland's Atlantic Music page. That's how I found out about Leigh Brockerville. Leigh comes from the south coast of the Rock and now lives in the St. John's area. He is a regular performer in the local bar scene and was in the band Kilkenny Krew. What first grabbed my eye here was his debut album's title, "Songs of Irish Rebellion volume 1". I am a big fan of the Irish rebel songs and in Leigh's case he actually played in Belfast in 2016 for the 100th year anniversary of the 1916 Easter Rising-so that is a big deal. My first 'needle drop' was for the Irish standard "Foggy Dew", it being my favourite rebel song, and Leigh's version is really good. "Black and Tans" actually opens up the album-the IRA tribute song is basically a taunt at the English backed Royal Irish Constabulary who were there to crush the rebellion-and wore black & tan uniforms. Leigh's great version reminds me of The Dubliners. "The Ballad of Billy Reid" pays tribute to this Provisional IRA member who was the first person to shoot and kill a British Army soldier in Belfast in 1971. Later that same year Billy was shot in the back as he tried to fend off the British, allowing his 2 comrades to escape. Leigh does a great job on this lament. As for the other songs, "Belfast Brigade/Green, White and Gold" features the melody of "Glory Glory Hallelujah" done up in great fashion-and then shifts to the IRA colours tune, and "Grace" is a touching number that's basic and beautiful. "Rock On Rockall", "Erin Go Bragh" and "One Road" are all tracks that Leigh delivers with great passion and conviction. The CD closes off with "Boulavogue"-a ballad commemorating the campaign of Father John Murphy and his army in County Wexford during the Irish Rebellion of 1798. It was composed by Patrick Joseph McCall in 1898, the centenary of the Rebellion. Leigh scores a home run with this one-with a voice that has the perfect balance of roughness and passion. For copies of this CD people can contact Leigh on Facebook, or can email brittany_eve@hotmail.com for CDs or more information.

CHRISTMAS DADDIES - HISTORY

On a cold and slushy November night in 1964, Jim Hill Sr. and the late Jack Dalton sat in the Derby Tavern on Gottingen Street. At the time, the Derby was the only place in Halifax you could get a steak and a beer. In stumbled a small boy, no more than eight years old. His toes were sticking out of his shoes, and he shivered from the cold. The young panhandler began to circle the room, only to be firmly removed by the bouncers. Not moments later, the persistent panhandler returned, but was removed once more. On his third return, Jack insisted they find out what was behind the child's tenacity.

A young mother and baby sister were at the boy's home, desperately in need of bread and milk. The boy was determined to get enough money to bring these necessities home so his family would not starve. A hat was passed around the tavern and the patrons raised $15 for the lad, an astonishing amount in 1964. While the boy left happy, Jack and Jim couldn't help but wonder what the child's family would do for Christmas. They sat at the Derby half the night discussing the child and others like him - they knew there had to be a solution. As Jack worked at the most popular local radio station and Jim at the television equivalent, surely together they could do something to help.

After discussions with the president of CJCH television and radio, Jim and Jack were sent away to iron out the details. They came back with plans for a telethon, and the president graciously donated use of the station and airtime. The men then approached the CJCH staff for their time and abilities. Inspired by a similar radio telethon in Boston, Halifax's Christmas Daddies was born. That year, the first Christmas Daddies telethon went on the air at midnight. After only two hours on air, concerned citizens were coming in off the street, offering anything they could to aid this worthy cause.

The telethon raised $1,500 that first year and received extensive media coverage. The next year support grew to an incredible $5,000. Jim and Jack were overwhelmed with the positive support they received from the public. Since the telethon's first year, Christmas Daddies has grown steadily, and to date has raised over $34 million for less fortunate children.
