NEW DECOMPRESSION TABLE RELIEVES PAIN

Darren Strong from Strong Chiropractic, announces a new, sophisticated computerized decompression table that allows the spine to be gently stretched and relaxed for spinal decompression therapy.

The pattern of alternating pulling and relaxing creates vacuum-like pressure which allows disc material that was herniated or protruded to be pulled back in the disc over time.

Patients will notice a reduction of their pain during these treatment sessions. Stop in today and ask about the new table and how you can benefit.

WEEKLY SMILE

My father worked at the Steel Plant and steel plant workers got a discount on coal and coke. We used the coal and coke for the upstairs heating with a Warm Morning stove that threw off heat really well.

For those of you who do not know what coke is, it is a refined coal product where most of the impurities of coal are burned off and the coke burns with less smoke and more heat. Naturally the coke is more expensive than coal.

We had a coal and coke bin and we had to keep padlocks on both of them. As I mentioned before we boys had a lot of ideas to make money. I put my mind to thinking of ways to raise more spending funds and I came up with the idea of selling coke to our neighbours for a small fee.

I started to charge 25 cents for a small bag of coke. I did all right for about two weeks until one of the neighbours asked my mother to send me over with a bag of coke. I then had to tell her about my new business adventure. "Oh, me shattered nerves! Wait until your father gets home!" I dreaded to hear the plant whistle at 4 o'clock because that would mean my father would be home shortly.

As soon as my father got in, my mother explained what I was doing and he looked at me and said, "So, you're a regular Irving Schwartz" (a local successful businessman). He said it was good that I was so businesslike because for the next month I wouldn't be getting any allowance.

I thought I got off with another one.

I don't know how many of you out there got totally sucked in by all the rave reviews and accolades the Netflix limited drama series 'Adolescence' received, but in the end this program was a total waste of my time-and a text book case of all hype, little substance. To recap, in an English town the police break down the door of a family home and arrest Jamie Miller (a 13-year-old boy) on suspicion of the murder of a classmate, Katie Leonard. Jamie is held at a police station for questioning, and then sent to a secure training centre. Investigations at Jamie's school and questioning by a forensic psychologist reveal that Jamie has been deeply affected by bullying at his school, via social media, involving what is known as the "Incel"; an online subculture (straight white males who can't get girlfriends so they objectify, blame and degrade women-and sometimes commit acts of violence towards them). So basically, they are total creeps. To it's credit the entire 4 part limited series was shot in one continuous non-stop movement per episode, no edits at all. That alone is an achievement, and something that until you're made aware of it you don't notice it. Also, the lead actor (Owen Cooper) who plays Jamie Miller is doing his first acting gig here-and he is amazing. His father (played by Stephen Graham) is great as well. Graham also wrote and produced the series. Brad Pitt was one of the executive producers. To each his own but I wish someone had told me not to believe the incredible hype around this show; the ending is flat, empty and very unsatisfying.

ON A GLUTEN-FREE DIET? - Are you living with celiac disease? Or perhaps your child suffers from gluten allergies? If so, you know all too well that avoiding gluten-based meals is imperative, but not always simple.

The good news? There are excellent gluten-free food alternatives in the market. The bad news is that gluten-free food presents an economic burden, as it's usually more expensive and product availability is greatest in upscale health food stores and restaurants.

Naturally, purchasing these expensive alternatives on a regular basis can add up over the year. With rising food costs brought on by inflation, managing celiac disease poses a potential challenge to families all over the country. On the bright side, it turns out that tax time is your opportunity to recoup some of those food expenses!

Since those suffering from celiac disease need to spend more on food for health and medical reasons, the Canadian government has a program to lessen some of the financial burden. We've answered some common questions on tax credits and support available below.

What do I need to do to claim my gluten-free food expenses? - Food expenses due to allergies can be claimed as medical expenses, though it does take preparation and organization throughout the year. Here are some tips to keep in mind to help come tax time. Make sure that you're eligible to receive this tax return and that it's in line with your doctor's recommendations. To qualify, you'll need to submit a form and letter from a medical practitioner confirming that you or your child has celiac disease and needs a gluten-free diet. Only gluten-free food expenses incurred by someone with a medically documented gluten-allergy can be claimed.

Have receipts on hand for each gluten-free food product that you want to claim. We recommend saving the original receipt in a folder, as well as taking a photo and saving it somewhere safe on your computer to ensure you have back-up. The key is to make this a part of your grocery shopping routine.

You'll need to keep a summary of each gluten-free food product bought during the year that's being claimed, along with the incremental cost and amount to claim. You'll also need to keep tabs on the cost of its conventional version. The dollar amount that'll be returned to you is dependent on the incremental costs that these specialty food products incurred. For example, if the box of gluten-free pasta is $4.00, and its durum-wheat version is $1.00, then you can claim $3.00.
