LADY ANTEBELLUM - "Own The Night-World Tour"

EagleVision - In a conversation I had recently with a friend I mentioned that I hadn't personally viewed many concert DVD's by Country artists. They immediately recommended this one, so I took their advice and I am glad I did. Of course by 2012 (the date of this DVD release)

Lady Antebellum had swept the Grammy awards a year earlier, scoring number 1 hits and millions in album sales in the process, but on-stage they were mostly known as an opening act for other bands. That all changed with a tour that saw the trio (Hillary Scott, Charles Kelley and Dave Haywood) play 100 nights, in 11 countries, to over a million fans. Their show in Little Rock, Arkansas was chosen for this recording. The live stage set-up is an amazing example of how Country music is so well entrenched into the entertainment mainstream-it's one fit for the biggest of rock bands, with projection screens, multiple levels and a full contingent of back-up musicians. The concert opens with the band rising up from under the stage, belting out "We Owned The Night", and it's clear right away that they did indeed own the night. The immense crowd is so into the performance that they become a part of the show. After watching the trio do the songs "Dancin' Away With My Heart", "Perfect Day" and "I Run To You" it's easy to understand why some people find that the line between soft rock and what's called Country is getting blurrier every day. This concert shows us just how good Lady Antebellum are live, with songs like "Hello World". "Just A Kiss" and "Lookin' For A Good Time" performed to perfection.

Documentary style clips are interspersed throughout the concert and personally I didn't find this distracting at all. There are some great bonus features as well, such as a cover of Aerosmith's "Sweet Emotion" and an appearance by Darius Rucker.

It goes without saying that the mega-hit song "Need You Tonight" would be part of this show (saving the best for last in this case) and its dramatic opening is really cool. Fans of the trio know all too well why they are so popular. This concert DVD shows the rest of the world why. Lady Antebellum definitely owned this night.
