BY PAUL POWER

ANDREW DOYLE - "The Price" (Add/Music) - Local artist Andrew Doyle deserves a lot of pats on the back for the wonderful concert held last Saturday in Sydney Mines, and that made me want to revisit this CD. When I first heard it I'll admit that I cheated a bit. I immediately went to the only cover song on the disc, Bad Company's "Shooting Star". This is my favourite Paul Rodgers song of all time and I wanted to hear if Andrew could do it justice-and he did-big time. Now back to the start-on the first track and album namesake ("The Price") Andrew has some help from a friend. As soon as I heard "Shooting Star" I thought, "wow, Andrew sounds like a young Matt Minglewood" (not that Matt is old!) and that's just who appears on "The Price". This song is fantastic and the blend of Andrew and Matt's voices is so natural that it's truly amazing. Matt also casts a long shadow on the song "Rain" as well, even though he's not actually on it. This number is 100% East Coast blues.

Petty/Jackson Browne and "Hope" is a moving search for the song's namesake. Both numbers highlight Andrew's skills as a songwriter, with "Hope" being a lot like a Blue Rodeo song.

There's lots of diversity on this disc; "Don't Let It Go" sounds like a Don Henley/Eagles song and "Just The Way It Goes" has a mild Calypso feel to it, like a Jimmy Buffett song played on a hot Sunday afternoon.

With all the vocal comparisons I've mentioned above, there's one more that I'd like to make-Ron Hines. I hope Andrew considers that a compliment, because that's what it is. If you're on the same page as Ron Hines and Matt Minglewood, you're in good company.

This album is proof that you don't always need a fiddle to make great Cape Breton music-all that matters is solid songwriting, a great back up band, a good producer (Fred Lavery) and an artist whose tenacity is to keep going year after year. This CD would be the perfect gift to send to a loved one anywhere from T.O. to Fort Mac, and back. "The Price" is well worth the price.

Most people are used to seeing/hearing Andrew performing in noisy bar settings, so this CD offers a nice change of pace, with some more insightful songs as well; "The Gift" reminds me of early Tom
